Synopsis

The Giver

Set in a society which at first appears to be utopian, The Giver is a 1993 American social science fiction children's novel. The novel follows a boy named Jonas through the twelfth and thirteenth years of his life. Everyone and everything has been converted to "Sameness;" no poverty, war, pain. At the age of 12, all young people are awarded their duties that they will have for the rest of their lives. Jonas is selected to inherit the position of Receiver of Memory, the person who stores all the past memories of the time before Sameness. As he receives the memories of the past, it is here that he realizes for the first time what has been extinguished in his community all in an effort to make life easier for everyone.

Arizona College and Career State Standards

RL.9-10.1: I can cite strong and thorough textual evidence to support analysis of what the text says explicitly as well as inferences drawn from the text.

RL.9-10.2 I can determine a theme or central idea of a text and analyze in detail its development over the course of the text, including how it emerges and is shaped and refined by specific details; provide an objective summary of the text.

RL.9-10.3 I can analyze how complex characters (e.g., those with multiple or conflicting motivations) develop over the course of a text, interact with other characters, and advance the plot or develop the theme.

RL.9-10.4 I can determine the meaning of words and phrases as they are used in the text, including figurative and connotative meanings; analyze the cumulative impact of specific word choices on meaning and tone (e.g., how the language evokes a sense of time and place; how it sets a formal or informal tone).

RL.9-10.5 I can analyze how an author's choices concerning how to structure a text, order events within it (e.g., parallel plots), and manipulate time (e.g., pacing, flashbacks) create such effects as mystery, tension, or surprise.

RI.9-10.3 I can analyze how the author unfolds an analysis or series of ideas or events, including the order in which the points are made, how they are introduced and developed, and the connections that are drawn between them.

RI.9-10.6 I can determine an author's point of view or purpose in a text and analyze how an author uses rhetoric to advance that point of view or purpose.

W.9-10.1 I can write arguments to support claims in an analysis of substantive topics or texts, using valid reasoning, relevant, and sufficient evidence.

W.9-10.3 I can write narratives to develop real or imagined experiences or events using effective technique, well-chosen details, and well-structured event sequences.

W.9-10.4 I can produce clear and coherent writing in which the development, organization, and style are appropriate to task, purpose, and audience.

W.9-10.6 I use technology to produce, publish, and display information flexibly and dynamically.

W.9-10.7 I can conduct short as well as more sustained research projects to answer a question (including a self-generated question) or solve a problem; narrow or broaden the inquiry when appropriate; synthesize multiple sources on the subject, demonstrating understanding of the subject under investigation.

W.9-10.9 I draw evidence from literary or informational texts to support analysis, reflection, and research.

SL.9-10.4 I can present information, findings, and supporting evidence clearly, concisely, and logically such that listeners can follow the line of reasoning and the organization, development, substance, and style are appropriate to purpose, audience, and task.

SL.9-10.5 I can make strategic use of digital media (e.g., textual, graphical, audio, visual, and interactive elements) in presentations to enhance understanding of findings, reasoning, and evidence and to add interest.

Using Pro's & Con's

An integral part of the story The Giver is that it is so vastly different from the society we live in today. There is such juxtaposition between the society/community that Jonas (the protagonist) lives in and the society/community the students of today live in and a pro's/con's list makes that more evident and eventually, better understood. Following is a template for students to record what they discover in the utopian society of The Giver. The utilization of this graphic organizer gives the student an opportunity to explore and discover about the differences between these two societies/communities. Giving the graphic organizer to the student at the beginning of the book and encouraging them to record instances on both sides as they read will provide valuable information for future writing endeavors and in-depth discussions.

Jonas's Community

Pro's	Con's

Writing Opportunities

Jonas's Community - Students will create a Pro's and Con's list (template to follow) of Community attributes. What are the good things about Jonas's Community? What are the bad things? Students will keep the list and add to it as they travel through the story. Encourage students to make a note of things that they may change on their list and explain why they have changed their mind about their value i.e., what used to be a pro they have changed into a con and what changed their mind.

Journals - Students will keep a journal throughout the reading of the journal. Here they will record responses to prompts in ten or more lines (Journal Prompts page to follow). These journals will require a title and a date for each response and more than one response can be written on a page. Journal writing can be used as an anticipatory set at the beginning of class where students are preparing to read a particular part of the book. Journals can also be used as a pre-group discussion device. Encourage students to use the space between journal entries as a place to record student-generated questions of the story i.e., "Why Jonas didn't say something to Asher about seeing beyond the apple?"

Using Journal Prompts

Journal writing in response to a provided prompt is beneficial for student integrating the text and relating it to their own lives. As we strive for more concrete text-to-text, text-to-world and text-to-self connections, journal writing fulfills this in a way that also employs writing. Although one can use journal prompts as an impetus to a discussion, they are best utilized for writing first so a student has time to consider how the question affects them personally. Providing a quiet 5-10 minute personal class time to do this writing makes for a better outcome and the oral responses can be voluntarily (some may be too personal to share out loud) given if the student so chooses.

As journals are more of a personal nature, assure your students that you won't share what they have entrusted to you alone to read (unless it is of a legal issue like harming or killing oneself or another). If they wish to share orally to the class, that is their prerogative. You may wish to grade journals simply on the fact that they have responded to a journal prompt or that they have completed so many out of the total given over the course of the book – this might include the amount of writing per entry. Ten lines or more per entry should give an acceptable-in-length response.

Journal Prompts

Title “No Animals” Imagine your world without animals. Explain how your life (or life in general) would be different.

Title “Volunteer Work” Should volunteer work be required of youth in your community? Why or why not? Explain.

Title “Absence of Fictional Stories” How would the absence of fictional stories affect your life, personality, and perspective of the world? How about the absence of historical texts? Explain.

Title “Past Memories” What memories of the past have helped you to make wise decisions in the present? How? Explain.

Title “Lying” Is there ever a time in your own life when it is okay to tell a lie? Explain. AND is there a difference between a big lie and a little lie? Explain.

Title “Norms/Rules” Have you ever been in a situation where the “norms” or “rules” were different than what you were accustomed to? How did this make you feel? What did you do to adapt to this difference? Explain.

Title “Play War” Do you agree that children shouldn’t “play” war? How do you feel about other media (video games, music videos, etc.) that portray violence? Explain.

Title “Choice” What does it mean to have choice? How would you feel if it was taken away from you? Explain.

High Level Questions

The Giver

These questions can be used to differentiate and scaffold instruction as a basis for class discussions, small group work, and/or extended individual writing assignments.

1. What is the significance of rules in Jonas's Community? Why are some rules socially acceptable, while others are strictly forbidden?
2. The Community used shame to reprimand Jonas for taking the apple home – yet no one ever spoke of it directly. A large function in the Community is to avoid disgrace. Ironically, Jonas was publicly yet privately shamed. Do you think this shaming was a fair way to address Jonas's transgression? Explain.
3. What happens when someone moves to a place where customs and rules of society are different? (Share a personal story about a time in which you were in a similar situation where you felt strange and/or foolish for not knowing the rules. How did others make the situation feel better . . . or worse?)
4. How do friendships change across the duration of the story? What causes those changes?
5. With which character in the story do you most closely identify or sympathize? Why?
6. Why are Jonas and others in the Community only exposed to a limited set of books? What types of reading, if any, did they do in school? How would the absence of fiction and historical texts affect Jonas's life?
7. In what ways would students in the Community break the rules? What behaviors are considered to be serious infractions at Jonas's school? How do you imagine these discipline issues are resolved? Who handles them?
8. The Five Qualities a Receiver must have are intelligence, integrity, courage, wisdom and the capacity to See Beyond. Explain what each of these traits mean to you and identify examples of ways one may demonstrate them. [To extend this – ask students to rank order the most to least important of the character traits noted above – encourage them to justify why they view some traits are more valuable than others.]
9. Given what you know about Jonas's ability to "see beyond," what do you think "hearing beyond" would mean?
10. Jonas is most struck by the new rule that he is allowed to lie – Why is permission to lie particularly startling to Jonas? How does lying affect others in the Community?

Using Choice Boards

Choice boards give students the opportunity to participate in multiple tasks that allow them to practice skills they've learned in class or to demonstrate and extend their understanding of concepts. From the board, students either choose or are assigned tasks to complete. Individual tasks address the grade level specific State Standards and also learning style modalities.

To scaffold the activities for struggling readers, teachers can modify the tasks using the blank template provided or give more details for performance criteria. Some teachers like to assign point values for the different tasks.

In order to support teachers, the choice boards developed for BCSCR are coded for specific State Standards.

Using a RAFT Matrix

A RAFT matrix enhances students' comprehension of novels they're reading information they're learning. It also provides a fun way to encourage student writing. RAFT is an acronym for role, audience, format and topic:

- Role – The role is the person or people the student becomes for this project. Sometimes students take on the role of a book character, historical figure, or contemporary personality, such as Peyton Manning, and at other times, they are themselves.
- Audience – The audience is the person or people who will read or view this project. They may include students, teachers, parents, or community members, as well as simulated audiences, such as book characters and historical personalities.
- Format – The format is the genre or activity that students create. It might be a letter, brochure, cartoon, journal, poster, essay, newspaper article, speech, or digital scrapbook.
- Topic – The topic pertains to the book. It may be an issue related to the book, an essential question, or something of personal interest.

RAFT is an effective way to differentiate instruction by providing tiered activities. The BCSCR RAFT matrices are scaffolded and can be adjusted according to students' achievement levels, English proficiency, and interests.

Project Goals

By the end of the funding period, in comparison to 2014 baseline:

- 40% of participating 4-year-old children will achieve significant gains in oral language skills;
- the percentage of 3rd-grade, 8th-grade, and high school students who meet or exceed proficiency of State reading or language arts assessments will increase by 15 percentage points;
- the percentage of parents who report reading with their children will increase by 25 percentage points; and
- 65% of teachers will indicate improvements in their reading instruction as a result of professional development as evidenced by school- and classroom-based assessments
